The Faculty Regalia

Scholars of ancient days wore the gown and its attached hood for the dual purpose of keeping warm in drafty, unheated buildings, and of identifying the particular clerical order to which they belonged.

The style of modern academic costume in America is based on an intercollegiate code established in 1895. The gown is commonly black, differing in type according to the level of the degree held. The doctor's gown is paneled in velvet and has bell-shaped sleeves, each trimmed with three matching velvet bars. Master's and bachelor's gowns have no trim. Sleeves of the master's are extra long, and are open either at the forearm or the wrist. Those of the bachelor's gown are pointed.

The mortarboard cap is proper for all American degrees and is worn both indoors and out on all occasions when gowns are used. The tassel, worn over the left front quarter of the cap, may be black or may be in a color representing the degree. Only holders of doctor's degrees may wear a gold tassel.

The hood is the most striking feature of the academic costume. Its shape, size and colors show both the degree of the wearer and the college which conferred it. The shell or base of the hood is invariably of black material, but the lining is in the color of the college or university granting the degree. The color of the border or edging of the hood designates the field of learning in which the degree was earned: for instance, white represents arts; scarlet-theology; golden yellow-science; blue-philosophy; pink-music; lemon-library science; brown-fine arts; purple-law; light blue-education; and drab-business administration.

The bachelor's hood has a two-inch velvet border; the master's a three-inch one; and the doctor's a five-inch one. The size of the hood also helps identify the degree; the bachelor's hood is three feet long, the master's three and a half, and the doctor's four feet.
